Aspects of data protection in employment relationships

Introductory remarks: The protection of personal data has become increasingly important in pace with the development of information technology. Several international documents have been adopted to regulate this area. The use of cameras at working places is often associated with the idea of big brother. Cameras allow to record and provide information, which may be very accurate. The purpose of this Questionnaire is to provide an overview on how camera surveillance (video recording) is treated in the legal systems of the participant countries.

As we’ve already informed you, in Armenia at working places of some departments (state institutions, organizations) are installed cameras, which allow to record and provide information on certain perimeter and can be implemented on the base of inner acts of the department.

Moreover, we would like to inform you additionally, that there are no legislative acts in legal system of Armenia which regulate the supervision (video record) of working places.
